Recording script

Bats are small animals that fly, but they are not birds. They usually sleep during the day and when they sleep they hang upside down. At night they wake up and fly around. But they don't like flying in the rain.

There are about 1,100 different kinds of bats in the world. Most of them live in warm places. There are about forty kinds of bats in the United States. Bats like sleeping in caves or old empty buildings.

These animals are useful to people because they eat a lot of dangerous insects.

A few kinds of tropical bats are dangerous. These are the fruit bats and vampire bats. Fruit bats can destroy a farmer's fruit trees. Vampire bats are dangerous because they live on the blood of other animals and people! Some people are afraid of them, but most bats do not hurt people.

Most bats are small; the common American brown bat is less than 10 centimeters long. The brown bat has big wings. When they are open they measure almost 36 centimeters. One of the biggest bats in the world is the flying fox and it lives in southeast Asia. Its body is almost 31 centimeters long and when it opens its wings, they measure about one and a half meters.

Bats have small pointed teeth and very small eyes. They cannot see well but they can hear better than people. When they fly they use their wings and ears, because the sounds they make help them find their way. Their ears help them to fly in dark caves and during the night. A bat cave is usually a noisy place because bats make all kinds of sounds to talk to each other.
